Annexe n°2 : Objectifs du Projet Doctoral

The increasing importance of English communication across various fields has spurred the need for effective language instruction, particularly in Algeria. Recognizing this, the University of Tebessa has established a specialized doctorate program in "Applied Linguistics and New Technologies" to address this growing demand. This program aims to enhance the quality of English teaching and learning within the university's English department, specifically focusing on the integration of new technologies.

Overall Objective:

- To advance the quality of English teaching and learning at the University of Tebessa, with a strong emphasis on integrating new technologies.

Specific Objectives:

- Equip graduates with the expertise and skills to excel in diverse professional settings related to English language teaching.
- Foster expertise in applied linguistics, language sciences, and the application of new technologies in language learning.
- Address critical issues within the field of English language teaching through the strategic use of technology.
- Cultivate graduates into effective educators and researchers, contributing to the advancement of English language teaching and learning at the University of Tebessa and beyond.
- Equip students with the latest technological skills for language learning and teaching.
- Develop expertise in technology-assisted language learning, language assessment, and computational and corpus linguistic methods.
- Explore the potential of AI for enhancing language learning and teaching.
- Investigate the ethical and social implications of AI in Higher education.
- Prepare graduates to be leaders in the field of AI.

✓ Le lien avec les axes stratégiques et prioritaires :

The doctoral program in "Applied Linguistics and New Technologies" aligns with numerous strategic and priority areas, demonstrating its significance for the University of Tebessa, and the Algerian Higher education system.

Evaluation of each thesis topic in relation to the prioritized topics:

1. Social Media Language in Political Discourse:

- Alignment: Aligns with priorities preparation for University 4.0, socio-economic impact, and visibility and influence. Promotes understanding of political communication in the digital age and its societal impact.
- Contribution: Insights into how political ideologies are shaped and disseminated through social media, valuable for educators, researchers, and policymakers.

2. Student Discourse Analysis on Social Media:

- Alignment: Aligns with priorities preparation for University 4.0, supervisory needs, and visibility and influence. Provides insights into student online communication and informs effective teaching practices.
- Contribution: Understanding how students use language on social media and adapting teaching to address evolving communication patterns.

3. Intercultural Citizenship through Video Conferencing:

- Alignment: Aligns with priorities preparation for University 4.0, socio-economic impact, and visibility and influence. Explores technology's potential for intercultural understanding and collaboration.
- Contribution: Development of innovative teaching methods using video conferencing to foster intercultural dialogue and understanding.

4. Globalized Multimodal Communication Analysis:

- Alignment: Aligns with priorities preparation for University 4.0, socio-economic impact, and visibility and influence. Analyzes how language and culture are shaped by online communication.
- Contribution: Insights into the impact of online communication on language and culture, valuable for educators and researchers in intercultural communication.

5. EFL Learners' Speaking Fluency through Technology:

- Alignment: Aligns with priorities strategic and priority sectors, preparation for University 4.0, supervisory needs, and visibility and influence. Focuses on effective technology-mediated language teaching for EFL learners.
- Contribution: Understanding the effectiveness of technology-mediated task-based language teaching for EFL learners, informing the development of improved teaching methodologies.

6. Mobile Apps and Online Platforms for Language Learning:

- Alignment: Aligns with priorities strategic and priority sectors, preparation for University 4.0, and visibility and influence. Analyzes the effectiveness of mobile apps and online platforms for language learning.
- Contribution: Insights into the effectiveness of different mobile apps and online platforms, helping educators and learners make informed choices about language learning technologies.

7. Graphic Design for Brand Identity in Algerian Social Media:

- Alignment: Aligns with priorities preparation for University 4.0, visibility and influence, and creation of innovative structures. Explores graphic design's role in building brand identity on social media.
- Contribution: Insights into how graphic design is used to build brand identity on social media, valuable for businesses and organizations in Algeria.

Overall Assessment:

The proposed thesis topics are well-aligned with the prioritized topics and address various aspects of University 4.0, strategic sectors, socio-economic impact, and university visibility and influence. Their research questions are relevant and have the potential to make significant contributions to their respective fields.

Le lien entre les projets proposés

Synthesis: Connections Between Proposed Projects

The proposed doctoral projects, while diverse in their specific focus, share several underlying connections that contribute to a cohesive and impactful research agenda. These connections can be summarized as follows:

1. Focus on Language and Communication in the Digital Age:

All seven projects explore different aspects of language and communication in the digital age. This shared focus reflects the increasing importance of digital technologies in shaping how we communicate, interact, and consume information. By examining various aspects of online communication, from social media discourse to technology-mediated language learning, these projects contribute to a deeper understanding of the evolving landscape of language use in the 21st century.

2. Emphasis on Technology and Innovation:

Several projects explicitly focus on the role of technology in language learning and communication. This includes projects investigating the use of social media, digital video conferencing, mobile apps, and online platforms for educational purposes. This emphasis on technology reflects the growing recognition of its potential to transform language education and enhance communication across borders.

3. Intercultural Communication and Global Perspectives:

Several projects address the challenges and opportunities of intercultural communication in a globalized world. This includes projects examining the use of social media by political leaders, exploring cultural hybridity in online discourse, and developing intercultural citizenship through digital encounters. These projects contribute to a better understanding of how language and culture interact in the digital environment, fostering greater understanding and collaboration across diverse communities.

4. Socio-economic Impact and Relevance:

Several projects highlight the potential socio-economic impact of their research. This includes projects examining the role of language in political communication, promoting effective language learning for EFL students, and exploring the use of graphic design for brand identity building. By addressing real-world challenges and opportunities, these projects demonstrate the relevance of applied linguistics research to various sectors of society.

5. Contribution to the Visibility and Influence of the University:

Several projects highlight their potential to contribute to the visibility and influence of the university. This includes projects focusing on cutting-edge research areas, addressing current and controversial issues, and showcasing the university's expertise in language education and technology. By pursuing research with high visibility and impact, these projects contribute to the university's reputation as a leading center for research and innovation in applied linguistics.

Conclusion:

In conclusion, the proposed doctoral projects, while diverse in their specific focus, share several important connections that contribute to a cohesive and impactful research agenda. This agenda emphasizes the importance of language and communication in the digital age, explores the potential of technology for language learning and communication, addresses the challenges and opportunities of intercultural communication in a globalized world, highlights the socio-economic impact and relevance of the research, and contributes to the visibility and influence of the university. By pursuing these interconnected projects, the doctoral program in "Applied Linguistics and New Technologies" can make significant contributions to the field of applied linguistics, language education, and digital communication, while also enhancing the university's reputation as a leading center for research and innovation.

Intitulé du sujet de thèse proposé Critical analysis of students' written discourse on social media: An evaluation of teaching practices.

✓ Contexte de la recherche :

Exchanges between university students on social media.

✓ Résumé et mots clés :

Evaluating the teaching practices is a very important step in the teaching-learning process at different educational levels especially that of higher education. Several methods can be used to evaluate the effectiveness of education policy as well as the teaching practices, among of which students' written feedback on social media. Despite the fact that this discourse might reflect a certain subjectivity that is controlled by students' attitudes towards teachers and subjects they teach, this discourse can always reveal a certain reality about the teaching practices and the evaluating procedures. This study, that adopts a Critical Discourse Analysis methodology, claims that a critical analysis of this type of discourse can contribute to understanding the reasons behind the success or failure of students in developing certain competencies and skills. Using Van Dijk's Ideological Discourse Analysis (1998) can help identify the gap between a positive Self and a negative Other. This study also suggests a set of recommendations that would strengthen teacher-student dialogue and look forward attaining pedagogical requirements and responding to students' needs. Finding a balance between both parts is not always a straightforward process as it requires the contribution of different practitioners and not only the teacher's responsibility.

Deploying New Technologies for Effective Language Learning: A Critical Analysis of Mobile Apps and Online Platforms in the Context of EFL Students at Tebessa University

✓ Contexte de la recherche :

The topic "Deploying New Technologies for Effective Language Learning: A Critical Analysis of Mobile Apps and Online Platforms. The Case of EFL Students at Tebessa University" falls within the broader field of applied linguistics, specifically focusing on the use of new technologies to enhance language learning.

✓ Résumé et mots clés :

This proposal investigates the potential of new technologies for effective language learning, focusing on the use of mobile apps and online platforms by first-year EFL students at the English Department of Larbi Tebessi University. Through a critical analysis of existing research and an empirical study involving students' experiences and learning outcomes, the thesis explores the affordances, limitations, and impact of these technologies on language learning. The findings provide insights into the effectiveness of mobile apps and online platforms for vocabulary acquisition, grammar practice, and communication skills development. Additionally, the thesis examines the role of gamification, artificial intelligence, and virtual reality in personalized language learning and their potential to enhance student motivation and engagement. By critically analyzing the case of EFL students at Tebessa University, this thesis aims to contribute to the ongoing discussion about the role of new technologies in effective language learning and provide recommendations for educators and policymakers seeking to integrate these technologies into language education programs.

Developing Intercultural Citizenship through Digital Video Conferencing Encounters

✓ Contexte de la recherche :

The context of the study is the teaching of Algerian and Foreign university freshmen who have never been exposed to intercultural pedagogy and Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) for a certain period of time. After that, the same groups of Algerian and Foreign students are put in contact with each other via the use of Digital Video Conferencing (DVC).

✓ Résumé et mots clés :

Most researches on the “intercultural” have had the tendency to deal with international contexts where different nationalities’ worldviews collide. Indeed, given the commonly agreed-upon definition, the international/global context is a prerequisite to any intercultural encounter (Byram, 1997; Knight, 1993). Besides, some research confined the “intercultural” to sojourns who visit other countries other than theirs (Byram, 1997). Some other studies consider interculturality to be related to context where communication with culturally-distinct others is inevitable, such as military bases (Knight, 1993).

However, the conception of the “intercultural” shifted attention and was reoriented to be no longer bound to people from different countries only. The “intercultural” rather refers to whoever is different from oneself even if one is from the same country (Jones, 2014). Therefore, the “intercultural” is shifted to the local level (Jones, 2014), wherein cultures of societal organizations, institutions, families, individuals’ physical abilities and sexual orientations, religions (interfaith), to name a few, within the country per se create intercultural settings.

Local ICC entails encouraging individuals to know more about who they are first, before attempting to know others and to collide with them. Indeed, knowledge of the self proved to be essential in the path to ICC, for knowing one’s culture fosters a sense of identity and belonging upon which one depends in identifying, comparing and differentiating oneself (Mizab, 2022). Moreover, knowledge of the self develops one’s repertoire to appropriately and effectively communicate with culturally-distinct others. Therefore, appropriate attitudes and skills are externalised as required by the intercultural, communicative context.

Intitulé du sujet de thèse proposé : The Role of Graphic Design in Building Brand Identity in Algerian Social Media

✓ Contexte de la recherche :

1.Cultural context

This topic is ripe with potential for exploration, given the unique cultural and digital landscape of Algeria. First, with regard to the cultural landscape, Algeria has a rich visual heritage, deeply influenced by Berber, Arab, and French influences. Understanding this visual language is crucial for designers building brands that resonate with the Algerian audience. Second, the religious and societal values affects the designing of brands advertising. Islam plays a significant role in Algerian society, and brands need to navigate these values carefully in their visual communication. Third, Algeria has a young and rapidly growing population, heavily engaged in social media. Understanding their visual preferences and online behavior is critical. Finally, Algeria has a complex social and political history, and brands need to be mindful of sensitive topics and cultural nuances in their messaging.

2. Digital Context:

Social media has penetrated in the Algerian society. Social media platforms like Facebook, Instagram, and TikTok are hugely popular in Algeria, serving as primary channels for communication and brand interaction. Furthermore, the algerian society is becoming a mobile-first society: Smartphones are ubiquitous in Algeria, influencing the design and format of visual content. Digital literacy is evolving: Digital literacy is growing, with users becoming increasingly discerning and demanding in their interactions with brands.

Résumé et mots clés :

This study aims at exploring the role of graphic design in building brand identity in Algerian social media. Particularly, it focuses on investigating how graphic design practices in Algeria are utilized to create and promote brand identities across social media platforms. The study will be carried out following a semiotic framework to decode how the semiotic elements are employed, focusing on how they communicate brand values and engage with the Algerian audience. To this end, the research questions would include : What are the key graphic design principles and strategies used by Algerian brands on social media? How do these strategies leverage semiotic codes and visual language to resonate with the local audience? What are the cultural influences on brand identity design in Algeria? To answer these question, a range of methods will be used: A semiotic-content analysis of brand visuals, interviews with designers and marketers are appropriate tools that woul yeild empirical data.

Exploring Globalized Multimodal Communication: Understanding Cultural Hybridity and Variation in Online Discourse

✓ Contexte de la recherche :

✓ Résumé et mots clés :

As digital communication continues to transcend geographical boundaries, understanding how cultures intersect and influence online discourse becomes paramount. This doctoral research aims to investigate the dynamic interplay between globalization, cultural hybridization, and multimodal communication in digital environments. By examining how diverse cultural and linguistic communities engage with and adapt multimodal communication practices online, this study seeks to unravel the complexities of globalized discourse and shed light on the emergence of hybrid communication styles in the digital era.

The use of Social Media Language to Transmit the Political Ideologies: the case of Palestinian and Israeli Leaders

Contexte de la recherche :

This study examines how social media shapes political discourse and influences public opinion in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. It focuses on how Israeli and Palestinian leaders use social media to promote their narratives, legitimize their causes, and sway public opinion. The study explores the strategic use of ICTs by both sides to influence the ongoing conflict and analyzes the language and content of social media messages to understand the complex dynamics of political communication in a contested digital environment.

Résumé et mots clés :

Social Media gas always played a vital role in informing ideas, Ideologies, and policies. The Israeli and Palestinian leaders worked with Information and Communication Technologies (ICTs) to develop an Internet -based distribution of information using social media. The two rivalries, Israeli and Palestinian leaders depended on social media to convince their people and the world with the legitimacy of their cause, and to pass their political ideologies.

Developing EFL Learners' Speaking Fluency through technology-mediated task-based language teaching: The Case of First Year EFL Students at the English Department- Larbi Tebessi University

✓ Contexte de la recherche :

This study explores how technology-mediated TBLT can improve speaking fluency among first-year EFL students at Larbi Tebessi University's English Department. It investigates the effectiveness of this approach in addressing the challenges faced by students in developing their spoken English skills.

Abstract:

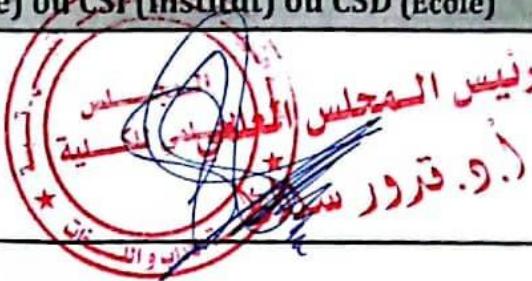

This PhD study investigates the effectiveness of technology-mediated task-based language teaching (TBLT) in enhancing speaking fluency among first-year EFL students at the English Department, Larbi Tebessi University. The study aims to address the challenges faced by students in developing their spoken English skills and explore the potential of TBLT to create engaging and collaborative learning environments. The research employs a case study approach, focusing on the implementation of technology-mediated TBLT activities and analyzing their impact on students' speaking fluency. The findings will contribute to a better understanding of how technology can be leveraged to improve EFL learners' speaking abilities, specifically within the context of first-year students at Larbi Tebessi University.
